FOREWORD

THIS fourth edition of the catalogue of the Dallas Public Art Gallery records acquisitions covering a period of twenty-six years, beginning with the purchase in nineteen hundred and three of September Moonrise by Child Hassam, and contains examples of the development of painting from the early Hudson River school up to the conservative moderns.

It has been the aim of the Dallas Art Association, which acts as directors and trustees of the Dallas Public Art Gallery, to assemble a collection of paintings and statuary comprising the best examples of those artists and sculptors who have made the history of art in America for the past quarter of a century. That they have achieved their purpose can be proven in no better way than by a visit to art museums elsewhere where one may find themselves familiar with the work of such representative artists as are shown in this collection.

Like the satisfaction of recognizing a great symphony which has endured through centuries, comes the delight of learning to know our great artists.

The remark is so frequently heard, "I don't know art, but I know what I like." This is the very basis of art, for as one develops, one finds a change in one's likes and dislikes . . . and this change of taste has recorded the development of civilization written in terms of artistic expression as exemplified in paintings, statuary, architecture, textiles, and ceramics.

The Art Gallery is as important a part of a city's educational system as the library, and these two, with the schools, are the vital forces in the training for the highest types of citizenship . . . to these aims is dedicated the Dallas Public Art Gallery.
